

THE ~~CORRUPT~~ CITY OF BASTION

The World According to Me

- ☠ Our tale begins on the island city of Bastion, a pretty swanky high-tech place in the middle of the Pacific Ocean - minus its unnerving history with its mad founder and demons. Bastion's construction started in the 70's and finished in the 80's as part of this foolhardy scheme by a billionaire to build a fully autonomous country of his own ... and open a portal to the underworld to become some sort of demon king. That ended up being a failure, of course, and what followed was a massive cover-up and the founder went missing. Surprise, surprise.
- ☠ Thanks to the aforementioned, Bastion's got a dense spiritual aura permeating through it leading to the world of the weird leaking into reality. Although this place is freaky enough with its underground cults, psychotic pop idols and famed directors dressing in dog suits.
- ☠ Bastion initially began as a singular massive artificial island but because of its booming population and particular security and financial needs, it was expanded, and a second island was built. Now it has evolved into megacity with an expansive underground network, a bunch of sustainable architecture and has the record for the most pizza shops in the world. Tasty.
- ☠ Me and Grey have two bases of operation here in Bastion: his apartment, and this abandoned military bunker that was converted into a hangout by the local kids. Both are as filthy as you'd imagine.

Sleeping isn't something I do but I still make myself at home on Grey's couch. There are several food stains to prove it.
